ABOUT

The New Jersey Association for Floodplain Management (NJAFM) is a statewide organization of more than 500 members and a chapter of the national Association of State Floodplain Managers (ASFPM), a leading voice in floodplain management policy and practice across the United States. NJAFM is dedicated to raising awareness of flood risk and advancing education and communication to protect public safety, property, and the economy. Although New Jersey's diverse landscapes and regions vary widely, flooding is a shared hazard that crosses all boundaries—remaining the nation's most common natural disaster and an ever-growing threat with rising economic and social impacts.
